

TRACK / DECODE / TRANSFORM

THE PATTERN-HUNTER'S JOURNAL

TAROTPULSE

WELCOME

Here's the pitch, no incense required: pull one card a day for thirty days. Write down what you got. That's the whole practice.

We know — you were promised a sacred journey of self-discovery. You'll get one. It just doesn't start with a ritual bath and a perfectly curated altar. It starts with you, a deck, and the willingness to be mildly annoyed by how often the same damn card keeps showing up.

Because it will. That's the point.

One card on a Tuesday is a mood. The same card on six Tuesdays is a message. The tarot doesn't repeat itself because the universe ran out of ideas — it repeats because you haven't heard it yet. A single pull is a snapshot. Thirty in a row is a time-lapse of your own psyche, and the patterns that surface are not random. We'd argue random was never on the table.

This is the part everyone skips. They pull, feel a feeling, move on — and the insight is gone by lunch. The tracking is what catches it. Thirty days of breadcrumbs, and suddenly you can see the trail you've been walking the whole time.

So: a card a day, a few honest lines, thirty days. No bypassing, no performance, no “everything happens for a reason.” Just you, paying attention long enough to hear what your own deck has been saying.

Grab a card. Let's go.

— Matt & Jaye Anne

HOW THIS WORKS

THREE MOVES

Daily — the pull (60 seconds). Pull one card. Write the card, whether it's upright or reversed, one honest line about what it landed on, and a single mood word. Don't interpret. Don't perform. Just log it. The whole point is that it's fast enough that you'll actually do it.

Weekly — the checkpoint (10 minutes). At the end of each week, look back at seven pulls and start counting. What card showed up most? Which suit ran the table? What repeated that you didn't notice in the moment? The prompts deepen as the weeks go — week one you're just noticing; week four you're reading your own pattern like a spread.

Day 30 — the portal (20 minutes). At the end, you synthesize. Your top cards, the throughline they trace, and the one thing the month is asking you to change. A portal is just a pattern you finally walked through.

Two rules. Honesty over insight — a boring true answer beats a profound fake one every time. And don't skip the checkpoints — the daily pulls are the data, but the checkpoints are where it becomes a reading.

WHAT YOU'RE TRACKING

THE METHOD

A single tarot pull answers a question. A month of pulls answers a question you didn't know to ask. Four things to watch:

Most-pulled card. The card your deck keeps handing back is the one with unfinished business. Frequency is the message.

Suit balance. Tally where your month lived:

- ✦ Major Arcana — the big stuff. Life lessons, karmic weather, the themes you don't get to opt out of.
- ✦ Wands — creativity, drive, passion, the fire.
- ✦ Cups — emotions, relationships, the inner water.
- ✦ Swords — thoughts, conflict, the stories in your head.
- ✦ Pentacles — body, money, work, the material ground.

Repeats — cards, numbers, symbols. Same card twice in a week. Three Fives across the month. These aren't coincidences you're cataloguing; they're a frequency you're tuning into.

The astro layer (optional). Track the sign or moon phase you pulled under, and a second pattern surfaces under the first. Skip it if it's noise. Lean in if it's not.

TarotPulse does all four counts automatically — see the back. But a pen and thirty days works exactly as well. The method is the point; the tool is just how we chose to solve it.

★ PULLED UNDER

THE DAY, IN A FEW LINES (OPTIONAL)

Last pull. Read the whole month back before you turn the page.

DAY 30

THE PORTAL

Thirty days of your own evidence. Time to read it as one thing.

YOUR TOP CARDS OF THE MONTH

What story do they tell together? Not card by card — as a single arc.

THE PATTERN

In one sentence: the month was about ...

THE REPEAT THAT MATTERED

The card / number / symbol that wouldn't leave — and what you finally think it wanted.

THE PORTAL

A pattern you can see is a pattern you can choose. What's the one thing you're walking through into next month?

KEEP THE TALLY

You just did thirty days by hand. That's the practice, and it stands on its own — but counting cards across months and years is exactly the kind of tedious-but-revealing work a tool should do for you.

TarotPulse logs every pull, counts your cards and suits automatically, surfaces the repeats you'd miss, and shows you the pattern across not just thirty days but the whole arc. Same method you just ran — it just keeps the count so you can keep your attention on the read.

No catch, no upsell on this page. If the 30 days hooked you, the app is here. If pen and paper is your thing, godspeed — same method either way.

BEFORE YOU GO

ONE LAST THING

That's the practice. A card a day, thirty days, and the nerve to read back what you actually wrote instead of the prettier version.

Here's the truth the incense-and-affirmations crowd won't tell you: thirty days from now you'll either know something about yourself you genuinely can't see today — or you'll have a journal full of receipts proving you saw it the whole time and looked away. Either one is a gift.

Both of them are the goddamn work.

Pull a card. We'll see you on Day 30.
